

Andrew Blauvelt, MD MBA

Andrew Blauvelt is adjunct professor in the Department of Dermatology at the University of Maryland School of Medicine in Baltimore, MD, USA, and owns Blauvelt Consulting, LLC, in Annapolis, MD, USA.

In recent years, Dr. Blauvelt has been the lead/senior investigator on numerous clinical trials in atopic dermatitis and other diseases, including CHRONOS, ECZTEND, JADE REGIMEN, HEADS UP, ADhere, and KNOCKOUT. He has published more than 470 papers and spoken globally on inflammatory skin diseases.

For the past 3 years, Dr. Blauvelt has made the Clarivate Highly Cited Researchers lists, representing the top 1% of cited scientists in the world. He is a Councilor of the IEC and is a member of the International Psoriasis Council and American Society for Clinical Investigation.

He received his undergraduate degree in electrical engineering at Purdue University, his medical degree at Michigan State University, and a healthcare MBA at Oregon Health & Science University (OHSU). Dr. Blauvelt trained in dermatology at the University of Miami and in cellular immunology under the direction of Dr. Steve Katz at the National Institutes of Health (NIH). Earlier in his career, he held senior staff positions at the NIH (senior investigator), OHSU (professor), and the Portland VA Medical Center (chief) as well as being owner and president of Oregon Medical Research Center (OMRC) from 2013-2022.